CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1933

THREE CENTS

Did You Know

By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT the colored residents of Circleville observed the official ratification of the 15th amendment, that part of the Constitution which gave them the right to vote, with a great eight-day celebration, beginning March 8, 1870. J. M. Meek and I. N. Lucas were the leaders of a committee which was responsible for the celebration. The event was featured by services in the colored churches, open air meetings with speeches, and finally a great supper served in the streets of the east end of the city. The following resolution was adopted:

"We, the colored citizens of Circleville and vicinity, hail with gratitude the intelligence of the ratification of the 15th amendment to the Constitution of the United States. We believe it is through the Providence of God and the indefatigable efforts of the Union Republican Party that this great result has been accomplished.

"Therefore, let it be resolved that we endorse the principles of the Republican party, and we pledge our undivided support so long as it remains true to the principles of liberty, equality and justice."

That "pound parties" were leading forms of entertainment in Circleville during the 1870's. Those who were invited to such events brought at least one pound of food to the party. About this same period, velocipedes, (forerunners of the bicycle), began to make their appearance here. Incidentally, the cost of these velocipedes was on the average of $1 per pound. That is, a vehicle for a 60-pound lad would cost about $60.

That "laughing gas," used in the art of dentistry, was first brought to Circleville in February, 1868. E. D. Moore, a dentist, who had his office on E. Main-st, brought the anaesthetic from Pittsburgh. Concerning the gas, the following appeared in The Herald of the time:

"We are still using this pleasant anaesthetic for painless extraction of teeth with remarkable success. Having given it in hundreds of cases, there is no ill effect. The whole operation of giving the gas and extracting the teeth is over in three to five minutes and at once the effects pass off, leaving no headache or nausea."

THAT an all time record for robberies and attempted thefts is believed to have been established in Circleville during the week of Jan. 4-8, 1869. The following report, contained in The Herald of the time lends credence to the belief that Circleville had its "bad men," even 70 years ago. The report follows:

"MONDAY NIGHT: The thieves visited the cellar of W. J. Weaver and carried off various articles, including a barrel of flour.

"TUESDAY: The robbers entered the warehouse belonging to James Smart and Co., broke open his safe and abstracted greenbacks to the amount of $90.

"WEDNESDAY: They broke a pane of glass out of a window in T. J. Epp's Boot and Shoe Store and helped themselves to a couple pairs of boots worth $27.

"THURSDAY: They entered the Scioto House and visited several of the rooms where persons were sleeping and managed to get $3 in change.

"During the same night they visited Tom Feeny's grocery but were fired on and frightened away. They also attempted to break into the house of Dr. Jones but were discovered and compelled to make a hasty retreat. Making an attempt to enter T. K. Brunner's Jewelry Store, they awakened George Brunner, who was sleeping in the back-room, and he promptly fired his revolver and they took to their heels."

That the first agitation for women's suffrage in Circleville was begun on March 3, 1870, when Mrs. M. V. Longlev, lecturer and agent of the Ohio Women's Suffrage Association visited here and delivered a speech at Peck's Hall. She was accompanied by a New York worker.

FEDERAL MEN ACT Textile Worker Admits Attempt In South

A plot to abduct the youthful wife of Richard J. Reynolds, Jr., heir to the twenty million dollar tobacco estate, had developed a degree of local interest today. Mrs. Reynolds is the daughter of John Dillard, president of the Sturand-Dillard Co., Island-rd. Mr. Dillard is a frequent visitor here.

Mrs. Reynolds before her marriage to Richard J. Reynolds Jr. was Elizabeth McCaw Dillard. They were married in Winston-Salem, Jan. 1, 1933.

Authorities today had moved to prosecute John Lanier, 35-year-old textile worker arrested by federal agents as the author of a plot to abduct Mrs. Reynolds. Lanier was trapped as he was about to pick up a decoy package designated in threatening letters to Reynolds. He will be charged with extortion by threats to kidnap the beautiful sportswoman.

Lengthy questioning of the prisoner by federal department of justice operatives brought an admission that he had written two letters to Reynolds demanding $10,000 in cash if Mrs. Reynolds was to remain unmolested.

The first letter was received on Oct. 28 and the second a few days later. They directed that Reynolds place $10,000 in a package fifteen feet from the sidewalk at the corner of Dunleith street and East Third street yesterday morning at 1 o'clock.

Reynolds appeared to his attorney, Stratton Covner and Sheriff Trammell Scott. They in turn communicated with the department of justice and two federal agents were sent from Washington.

QUESTIONED ALL DAY Placing the decoy package of bills at the designated spot, the officers hid nearby and waited until 6 a. m. yesterday until Lanier walked by several times, hesitated and then picked up the package.

Lanier was arrested and questioned secretly all day. His wife likewise was questioned, but the textile worker in a statement made last night absolved her of all blame.

Mrs. Reynolds meanwhile was being carefully watched at the family home, Reynolds. She is reported to be in a delicate condition of health.

Garden of Betrayal of Jesus is Murder Scene

JERUSALEM, Nov. 4.—The biblically-famous garden of Gethsemane and the Mount of Olives were the scene of a thorough investigation today the mysterious slaying of an American dancer and an Indian moslem, apparently her guide.

The victims' bodies were found in an olive grove near the garden, historically famous as the scene of Christ's betrayal by Judas and lying at the foot of the Mount of Olives.

The girl was Carol Niedergesswass, 25, known on the stage as Carol Winter and as Joan Winter. She was born in Seattle, Wash., and her parents now are believed to be living in New York. The man, Manammed Kirmani, was believed to be from Madras, a member of the Indian civil service.

Police were completely baffled as to a motive for the crime. Miss Niedergesswass had been shot in the head and her companion in the back. Doctors said each had been dead about 48 hours when their bodies were found.

It was possible the pair were victims of sniping by Arabs in one of the frequent outbreaks of shooting which have occurred in the vicinity during the past ten days, but discovery of but one fatal wound on each body tended to indicate outright murder.

Boy Scout Department Of Pumpkin Show Urged

A plea for a Boy Scout department of the annual Pumpkin Show has been received today by Mack Parrett, Jr., secretary of the event, from Kenneth A. Connelly, director of education and publicity of the Central Ohio Area of Boy Scouts of America.

Mr. Parrett, heartily in favor of the suggestion, intends to present the matter to the Pumpkin Show directors at the proper time.

The plea was made in a report to Mr. Parrett of activities of Scouts in the last show. Mr. Connelly said: "My recommendations for another year would be that a regular size concession tent 10x12 be put up so that a large table and sufficient room for staffs, stretchers, cots and other equipment will be available. My second suggestion is that a department of the Pumpkin show be created for the Boy Scouts. This would certainly help to make the Pumpkin Show 'Bigger and Better.' Several county fairs have done this with very fine results."

A number of rules were listed by Mr. Connelly which he would have incorporated in the Boy Scout department.

Mr. Connelly's report of the Scout activities in the past Pumpkin Show follows:

"October 4, 12 boys, 49 hours.

October 5, 23 boys, one leader, 153 hours.

October 6, 28 boys, two leaders, 213 hours.

October 7, 33 boys, two leaders, 188 hours.

C.C.C. YOUTHS ESCAPE INJURY IN CRASH HERE

Bus Loaded With 20 Cincinnati - Bound Yuths Hits East-Bound Train

NOISE IS BLAMED Disaster Evaded by About Five Seconds

Twenty members of the civilian Conservation corps, all Cincinnati-ans, escaped the clutches of death by five seconds, Friday evening, when the bus in which they were riding from Camp Hocking to Cincinnati ran into the tender of an east-bound Norfolk & Western train. The accident happened at 6:25 p. m. at the W. Main-st crossing.

The youths obtained another bus later in the evening and resumed their journey. All were going home after serving their six months enlistment in the Civilian Conservation corps. Many of them had re-enlisted and were going home only for furlough over the weekend.

Their camp was located south of Laurelville in Hocking-co.

ONLY FEW BRUISED First reports uptown were that a number of them had been killed but as soon as police officers and others appeared it was learned no one was seriously hurt. A few of the youths sustained bruises when thrown to the floor of the bus.

The railroad gates were not down but the warning bell was clanging and witnesses say the engine's whistle was blowing when the truck approached the track. James Harden, 34, of Laurelville, Rt. 2, owner and driver of the bus, said confusion within the bus prevented him from hearing the train. He started to drive onto the railroad right-of-way before he saw the locomotive. Fortunately the driver turned his bus south, in the same direction as the train was going.

The vehicle did not turn over. The train of about 100 empty coal cars, was engineered by C. T. Leeper, 1311 19th-ave, Columbus, with J. W. Adams, of Portsmouth, as conductor. The engine traveled about three blocks before coming to a stop.

Had the truck been driven on the track five seconds sooner, the toll of dead and seriously injured would undoubtedly have been high.

Another bus filled with "forest army" boys was following that driven by Harden. It went on to Cincinnati.

TRAIN NOT DAMAGED

The front end of Harden's bus was badly damaged and the vehicle was towed to the E. E. Clifton garage. The train was not damaged and went on its way after a short while.

Officers Raymond Smith, Fred Fitzpatrick and Tom McManamy investigated the wreck, which is the second to occur at the W. Main-st crossing in the last two months, the other being a truck carrying concrete block to the new post office at Springfield. The truck, heavily-loaded, stalled in the path of an east-bound train and was demolished.

GOVERNORS TO AGAIN APPEAL

Conference Leads To Belief Plan Is Rejected; Further Study Expected.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—A new appeal to President Roosevelt to order price fixing for farm products was to be made today by five governors from states where the farm strike is smoldering.

While the president is sympathetic toward the aims of the farm state governors, their hope of persuading the administration to adopt their plan had been shattered.

The governors, after a day and a half of conferences, construed objections raised by administration spokesmen to constitute a flat rejection of their immediate price-fixing plan.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, however, preferred to say that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration was in sympathy with the objective of the governors and stood willing to consider the plan further in detail.

With the governors warning that the farm strike movement may become a calamity, Wallace and other officials were confident in the success of the present plan.

State Amendments, Mayor and Council Races to Prove Attraction With Polls Opening at 6:30 a. m.; Candidates Put on Finishing Touches Over Week-end; Officials Receive Instructions.

Officials of the various precinct election booths of the city and county have received their instructions from the board of elections, supplies have been distributed to each and everything is in readiness for the opening of the polls Tuesday morning in what promises to be a momentous election.

Interest is not confined to only one feature, but many different problems will be presented to the voters for consideration. Foremost, as far as local interest is concerned, is in the race for mayor, city board of education, council, justice of peace and constable.

Contests are found in each case and the last few days have seen much activity in the chase for every office.

In council the predominant issue is "Do you or do you not favor municipal ownership of utilities?"

The question is foremost because an engineer's report is ready for submission in open council and the details of this report are expected to have much to do with the city's history in the next year or two. A survey of candidates for council shows that nearly all councilmen are using as their campaign plank, "We are for lower rates in local utilities and unless the private utilities abide by what we think is fair, we are for building a municipal plant or plants."

The Circleville Citizens' league is expected to take action within the next day or two to state its stand on the various candidates for the council jobs.

From the survey of council candidates it is certain that utility rate discussions will be the chief topic in the council which takes office in January, even more so, in fact, than the one now holding sway.

VILLAGERS ACTIVE

All the county's villages have their own contests with the race at Ashville promising to be on not-to-be-forgotten soon. Mayor E. E. Fraunfelser finds four other candidates seeking his job with the result that much political activity is prevalent there. The village council and the boards of education are also hot-beds of activity.

Willisport has its race and so do several others. Several private fights are being made in the various townships with trustees and school board members being elected.

The polls open at 6:30 a. m. and close 12 hours later. S. T. Rife, chairman of the board of elections, pointed out Saturday that the law calls for the polls to open at 5:30 a. m. Central standard time and that no mention is made of Eastern standard time which now governs the greater part of the state.

More than 100 absent and disabled voters' ballots have been received.

May the occasion be one of joy and of renewed consecration.

After the debacle of the Disarmament Conference in Europe many of us threw up our hands in disgust. We said, "Let them kill themselves if they want to. We'll have nothing to do with their troubles. Keep out." Now that is easily said than done. How do we know we can keep out. How do we know what circumstances may drag us in. We are too ready to say—Let them kill themselves. The future of brotherhood and antagonism is not an easy process. It is not easy for us to be kindly even at a distance. Jesus said, "Love your enemies. Pray for them that despitefully use you." God is looking for the man who will pray, who will carry on his heart the burden of a world full of strife and hatred who will feel the pain and sorrow of it. For us as Christians there is no room for vindictiveness and hatred, or even stand-offishness. True, we cannot settle so great problems, but God can and will when we turn to Him. Your church is working and praying for world peace. Join in. Go to church tomorrow. Take a friend.

WORSHIP AND MORAL CONFUSION

There are times when the distinction between virtue and vice in its modest form is very faint; ever and anon arises the question what is wrong and what is right? A technique is necessary for sharpening correct judgments. Worship proves competent for this.

Everyone who prays knows what it means to have a perplexed mind which gradually becomes quiet and assured while worshipping. New judgments and conclusions are reached, new points of view attained. That must have been in the mind of Paul when he prayed "that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you a spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him." 1. How far may we proceed along the line of expediency and compromise in settling disputes?
2. What would this Council of Jerusalem have to say today to the League of Nations and the World Court?
3. To what extent should denominational tenets and practices be surrendered in the interests of church unity?
4. What are the dangers connected with religious controversies?
5. How determine what are essentials and non-essentials when attempting to settle difficulties?
Clericus says, "Nearly all troubles, family, civic, national and international, could be peacefully settled if the opposing parties would meet in conference, having an open mind, willing to get a wider horizon and a border view. This is the way for world peace and much is to be said in favor of the League of Nations and the World Court."

Lesson for November 5
PAUL IN JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:1, 2, 22-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. II Cor. 3:17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Settling a Dispute.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Only Way.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Looking to the Church for Guidance.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Heeding the Voice of the Church.

I. The Controversy in the Church at Antioch (vv. 1-5).
The occasion of the controversy was the return of Paul and Barnabas from their first missionary journey. Upon their return they gathered the church together and rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles. The difficulty was a most serious one, for it threatened the disruption of the church into a Jewish and Gentile division. The point at issue was not the admission of the Gentile into the church. That had been settled some years before when Peter received Cornelius and his household. The question now was: On what ground could they be received? Should Gentile converts be required to keep the Mosaic law as a condition of salvation? That which brought this issue into prominence was the coming of certain men from Jerusalem who declared, "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses ye cannot be saved" (v. 1). The problem was so difficult that Paul and Barnabas were unable to put these men to silence. The brethren at Antioch decided to refer the matter to the mother church at Jerusalem. Accordingly, Paul, Barnabas, and others were sent as a deputation to Jerusalem. On the way they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the news of the conversion of the Gentiles, which was received with much joy.

II. The Deliberations of the Council (vv. 6-21).
1. Peter's address (vv. 6-11). He argued that God had borne witness of his acceptance of the Gentiles by giving his Holy Spirit unto them as unto the Jews (Acts 10:34-47). Since, therefore, God had not put a difference, it would be folly for them to do so. God's action in sending the Spirit unto them was the unanswerable proof that no distinction was to be made.
2. Paul and Barnabas rehearse their experience (v. 12). They told how that God had set his seal of approval on their preaching of salvation by grace through faith apart from works, by the working of signs and wonders through them.
3. The argument of James (vv. 13-21). He showed how the truth declared by Peter harmonized with the prophecy of Amos (Amos 9:11-15). He made it clear that the reception of the Gentiles was not in conflict with God's plan, but in strict harmony therewith. God's plan, as set forth in James' speech, is as follows:
a. God would visit the Gentiles to take out from among them a people for his name (v. 14). This is what is now going on—the worldwide preaching of the gospel and the calling out of the church.
b. After the completion and removal of the church from the world, Israel as a nation will be converted and restored to their land with all its privileges by the Lord himself upon his return (vv. 16, 17a). The building again of the tabernacle of David means the restoration of the Davidic throne, Gabriel, in announcing to Mary the birth of Jesus, said, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David" (Luke 1:32).
c. This will be followed by the conversion of the world through the

What Price Knowledge?
The story is told of a landowner who invited four young men to spend their summer holiday on a tract of land he owned a small rocky valley through which ran a small stream. They were told that they could have for themselves whatever of value they found on it.
The first one looked over the land, gave a grunt of disgust and left, saying "The land is worthless. There's nothing to see, nothing to use, nothing to do."
The second man, an artist, saw in its winding valley many beautiful scenes that he transferred to canvases.
The third, a botanist, found some rare herbs and roots which he sold for a considerable sum of money to a manufacturing druggist.
The fourth, a geologist, found an old boring in the rock, evidently abandoned by some prospector. After considerable drilling he found in the pocket some valuable gold nuggets. Each man saw what he had been trained to look for. The more knowledge we acquire the more rich and valuable our experiences will be.

agency of converted Israel (v. 17b, cf. Rom. 11:15). He showed that there is no conflict when the Scriptures are rightly divided.
d. James' proposition (vv. 19-21). His judgment was that the Gentiles should not be troubled with the things which were Jewish, but should be warned against the perils of heathenism, such as meat offering to idols, fornication, from things strangled, and from blood.
III. The Decision of the Council (vv. 22-29).
The mother church accepted the resolution offered by James and came to an unanimous agreement. They not only sent a letter stating the decision of the conference, but took the wise precaution to send influential men along with Paul and Barnabas to bear the same testimony by word of mouth. This letter denied the authority of the Judaizing teachers (v. 24), and declared the method by which this decision had been reached (vv. 25-27). They wisely put the Holy Spirit first.
IV. The Decision Delivered to the Church (vv. 30-35).
The church at Antioch was called together to hear this report. Its reading brought great rejoicing. Paul and Barnabas were now free to promote the great missionary work.

Church Forum

What is the most effective type of preaching for times like these? This question is answered by Dr. Merton S. Rice, pastor of the M. E. church of Detroit. He says, "Of course must not be made to seem to sit in judgement upon any of my brethren, vast numbers of whom could easily tell me how and what to do. I am however personally convinced of the need of intense religious preaching, preaching of convictions that we hold religiously. The pulpit never was the place for mere argument. It is the place for the declaration of conclusions. I leave the vast amount of my theology in my study. I do not suppose I have a vast amount of theology, but I am a little concerned to pour controversial things upon my people. I use my beliefs in theology as a means to arrive at the convictions I hold and these are preachable. I never find salesmen eloquently discoursing upon the machinery in the factories from which their wares come. I do find them displaying and describing the product in the most convincing forms. I do not believe I have faced audiences as hungry for genuine religious preaching as the audience of this day. Many foundations have been shaken. The great truths of the Christian faith were ever more solid."

The man who has a right to boast does not have to boast.

TIGERS DEFEATED AS LEAGUE ENDS IN TIE

Collier Rips Red and Black Line to Shreds in 33-12 Game; Bexley Gains Tie For Lead by Defeating Delaware, 7-0; Local Tie With Grandview Keeps Bobcats Out of First Place.

Playing valiantly but unable to stop a round-shouldered youth named Collier who did everything but steal the shoes off Coach Pete Herberholz' athletes, the Tigers went down to a 33-12 defeat at the hands of Westerville's great team, Friday. The game was played in the 'dry capital' before a large crowd.

The Tigers played as well as they have all year but they were unable to cope with the slashing, driving attack of the Ballenger-coached youths.

The first period ended 13-6 and the half found the score 20-6.

The Red and Black touchdowns were scored by Fred Grant and Gaines Hill, the former on a fumble back of the goal and the latter on a plunge.

Westerville's victory gives that team a tie with Bexley for the Central Buckeye league championship. Grandview finished in third place, being kept out of a tie for first by playing a scoreless draw with the local team.

Westerville's loan defeat came at the hands of Bexley, 7-6, Grandview turned the tables on Bexley by a two-touchdown margin. The only game the Grandview Bobcats lost was to Westerville by a 3-0 score, a field goal in the final minute turning the trick.

Grandview had an easy time defeating Marysville, 27-0, at Marysville Friday afternoon and since the Jerry Kingsmore team comes here next Friday in the closing game of the season it looks like the Tigers will be able to evade the cellar spot for which they seemed destined.

A recovered fumble led to a Bexley, 7-0, victory over Delaware in the college town Friday afternoon. The break came in the third period with Miller, Bexley center, covering the free ball. A shovel-pass gained 18 yards and Hoffman, fullback, crashed the line for the touchdown.

Other gridiron results of Friday follow:

Columbus West, 39; Central, 6. Columbus South, 38; Urbana, 0. Millersport, 12; Logan, 8. Greenfield, 6; Xenia Home, 6. Wooster, 14; Millersburg, 7. Medina, 25; Akron East, 13. Portsmouth, 26; Cleveland, Glenville, 7.

Pomeroy, 20; Gallipolis, 0. Columbus Academy, 42; Gahanna, 0.

Worthington, 13; Upper Arlington, 7.

FAVOR 'BUCKS' TO TURN BACK INDIANA TEAM

COLUMBUS, Nov. 4.—Indiana, spoiler of Ohio State's title hopes in 1932, will meet the Buckeyes in Ohio stadium at 2 p. m. today in the most uncertain Big Ten game of the season thus far.

Ohio State and Indiana have prepared for this game in different ways. The Hoosiers have had two weeks of rest, a fortnight in which their cripples have had a chance to recover. The Buckeyes have played a hard, thumping game of football against North-western and then set out to change their offense on three days' notice. In other words, Ohio State is attempting to do in a week what the football experts consider is a season's work.

TWO FACTORS

The outcome of this game should depend on one or two things: how effective a passing attack Billy Hayes has built for the Hoosiers, and how quickly Ohio State's men can adapt themselves to their new formation.

For the first time since the Minnesota game, Indiana will have its entire squad available. Four driving backs will be ready to go, Dauer, Veller, Huffman, and Walker, a heavy backfield around which Coach Hayes has built what he calls a "basketball attack".

With two 200 pounders at the ends in Ettore Antonini and Fitz Lyons, Hayes has built a passing attack which will test the Ohio State secondary.

Although Sten Pincura, the Lorain sophomore, played well against Northwestern last Saturday when he replaced Carl Cramer, it is probable that Cramer will be back in the starting line-up against Indiana. A fast, shifty runner, Cramer is especially suited for the new attack. Coach Williamson is building. The end situation is in a muddle. Co-Capt. Sid Gillman is out with an injured knee, and Padlow has not been showing to a vantage.

Every voter has a right to know how its public servants spend their tax-money. The point in question is, "How did the County Board of Education stand on the amount of taxes it needed to pay expenses?" The answer is that Messrs. Roosevelt a Factor

A WHITE HOUSE statement that the president is "taking no part, active or otherwise, in the New York municipal election campaign can be accepted without weakening belief that the Roosevelt influence will have an effect on the outcome.

The part taken by the president when Postmaster General Farley—Mr. Roosevelt's political guide—brought out McKee as a candidate for mayor. That the postmaster general would have dared do this without the approval of his chief is not to be thought of.

The Farley sponsorship is thus interpreted in New York, with attempts to capitalize it being made by the McKee forces. McKee himself in a recent campaign speech was quoted as declaring that "a vote for LaGuardia is a vote against Roosevelt; a vote for McKee is a vote for Roosevelt."

The wisdom of the president's permitting himself to become involved in the fight is questionable, but no white house statement now merely denying that he is taking part in it will change the fact that his administration is an issue. A direct statement from him favoring McKee would, of course, have greater effect than his passive approval of the McKee candidacy. But this he will not make.

Should McKee be defeated, it would be hailed by opponents of the administration as a defeat for the president.

There is an obvious danger in that possibility but one which was invited when Mr. Roosevelt stepped into the picture.

If a controlled dollar means the kind that will stick around longer we are in favor of it.

Care is Needed

MICHIGAN'S experience in trying to cope with a crime wave which is common to the country may serve as a warning to other states contemplating preventive steps without giving due consideration to constitutional limitations.

The supreme court of Michigan has declared invalid a so-called public-enemy law enacted in 1931 and aimed particularly at racketeering. The court declared that hoodlums could not be held guilty of criminality merely on the basis of their reputation. Under the new statute, "proof of recent reputation" of having engaged in an illicit business was made prima facie evidence of guilt.

Such a provision, said the state's highest court, was in conflict with the constitutional mandate that a defendant is presumed to be innocent until proved guilty.

The great increase in crime has caused many radical proposals to be put forward as remedies. Such a situation gives rise to the danger that materialized in Michigan.

New laws may be necessary in combating crime, but care must be exercised that none of the fundamental rights guaranteed citizens under the constitution are invaded or violated.

THAT'S MY BOY!

by FRANCIS WALLACE
AUTHOR OF "HUDDLE"

SYNOPSIS

"Big Jeff" Randolph, now in his second year on the Thorndyke variety and one of the nation's greatest football stars, has had a brilliant grid career ever since his high school days in little Athens, a mid-west factory town, where Mom and Pop and the rest of the family are now listening over the radio to the game between their boy's great eastern university and Indiana State. "Big Jeff" is just Tommy back home which he visits on vacations and starts with his social-sartorial splendor. He's gone somewhat high-hat with the seal of Thorndyke upon him and has drifted away from Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the richest man in Athens—the owner of the glass-works in which his Pop labors. "Big Jeff" stars in the victory over Indiana State, 7-0, which game was witnessed by the Whitneys and heard via radio by Mom, Pop, Uncle Louie and the neighbors. . . . At the Stadium, "Jeff" introduces Miss Whitney, his high school sweetheart, to Elaine Winthrop, his college crush, the erstwhile little Tommy affecting a broad English accent. . . . Back home Uncle Louie banks his hopes for the postmaster'ship on Al Smith, but you know what happened in '28. . . . Mom, and even Pop, felt sorry. . . . Athens plans to banquet its great grid hero during Christmas vacation and Pop is invited to make a speech on that occasion. . . .

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Then Mom told him he'd better be careful because it wasn't supposed to be that kind of a speech but just to talk about Tommy; but Pop got up and began to walk around and think of other things; he would tell them because one of the things wrong with this country was that people were afraid to speak up to the monied people and that this time they were going to hear plenty from a man who wasn't afraid to tell them. He'd tell them about the eight-hour day and about the bullsbeevies that were ruining the country and how they should all be sent back to the old country.

"No," said Mom, almost crying, "you'll disgrace us all and Tommy, too, and everybody will get mad."

Then Pop began to get mad at Mom and said she was like all the rest, afraid of the reform people and the monied people; and he'd tell the Booster Club too, what he thought of them and that what the town needed was some men with good business heads; and he'd tell the Chamber of Commerce about spying on a man and how much money he owed and all that. Pop had wanted to tell them all that he thought for a long time and this was his chance and nobody was going to stop him.

He got louder and louder and while he was talking to himself in a low voice, and when he found out what was up he said that he was the one to make the speech, not Pop, because he had been in politics all his life and knew a lot of big men and had sat on the same platform with Bryan when he had spoken in town in nineteen-eight, and knew how to make a speech better than Pop who was only a workman.

Then Pop hit the ceiling and said if he hadn't been a workman Uncle Louie would have starved long ago because he had never earned an honest dollar in his life and was one of the town's grafters and he would tell them that, too, when he got up to talk. And Uncle Louie jumped up and said that Pop would have to prove that in court because he would sue him for libel.

He got louder and louder and while he was talking to himself in a low voice, and when he found out what was up he said that he was the one to make the speech, not Pop, because he had been in politics all his life and knew a lot of big men and had sat on the same platform with Bryan when he had spoken in town in nineteen-eight, and knew how to make a speech better than Pop who was only a workman.

Then Pop hit the ceiling and said if he hadn't been a workman Uncle Louie would have starved long ago because he had never earned an honest dollar in his life and was one of the town's grafters and he would tell them that, too, when he got up to talk. And Uncle Louie jumped up and said that Pop would have to prove that in court because he would sue him for libel.

and Pop said Uncle Louie had been going to sue somebody all his life but had never sued anybody yet because he was afraid to set his foot in a court room for fear he'd never get out.

Mom got them quieted down and finally Pop said he hadn't really meant that Uncle Louie was a crook because if he was he'd have something to fall back on instead of wasting his life waiting for the Democrats to get in; and Uncle Louie said Pop wasn't so smart himself or he'd have his own home and Pop said there was a good reason for that; and Uncle Louie said if he wasn't welcome around there he wouldn't stay and Pop said he could suit himself.

Then they both got quiet and Mom brought in some coffee and cake and they all had some.

"Anyhow," Pop started again, "how could you make a speech when you've never even been invited?"

"I was invited to banquets in this town before you knew what a banquet was," Uncle Louie said.

Then they got started again and Mom couldn't stop them but, as luck happened, Pete came in then.

"Pipe down," he said, "before the fire-department comes up and turns the hose on both of you!"

Then they did quiet down and went to bed.

"Were the neighbors listening?" Mom asked Pete.

"Who cares?" Pete said. "We're paying the rent."

But the next day, at Butcher Brown's, Mom knew they had been listening; for no sooner had she come in than Mrs. Johnson asked: "Was somebody sick at your house last night, Miss Randolph?"

"I thought I heard a noise," "Oh," Mom said, "that was Jim Flannigan's speech, I guess. I told him maybe he was talking too loud because the neighbors around are easily disturbed." How did she like that?

"I thought I heard Louie, too," Mrs. Farrell said, picking over the lettuce as if everybody wanted to eat what she had handled.

"Oh," said Mom, "Louie was helping Jim—Louie's a great speech-maker, you know."

"Yes," Mrs. Farrell said, "Louie's a great talker, all right." She laughed, like a sick hen cackling.

"Yes," Mom answered, laughing. "I've often told him he should have been an insurance man, the way they talk a leg off a person."

"But," said Mrs. Johnson, "what's the speech about?"

The other ladies listened carefully, although Mrs. Farrell pretended to be picking over the tomatoes. Mom took her time.

"Oh," she said, "I thought you knew. I guess it ain't been in the papers yet, though."

"I ain't seen nothing," Mrs. Johnson said.

"Why," Mom answered, as if it were nothing, "it's just a banquet—have you got a good soup bone today, Butcher?"

"What kind of a banquet?" Mrs. Flannigan persisted.

"Oh," Mom said, "the town is going to give a big banquet for Jeff when he comes home Christmas."

"A feed, huh," Butcher Brown asked, "where you going to buy your meat?"

Mom laughed. "Oh, you'll have to see the Committee, Butcher. I'm just an invited guest—naturally, they'd invite his mother and father."

"Is it free?" Mrs. Flannigan asked.

"Oh no," Mom said, "except for the invited guests like the mayor and the school board and me and Pop—I suppose everybody at the head table will get in free."

"My," said Mrs. Johnson, "sounds like a big affair. What're you going to wear?"

"I don't know," Mom said, "I hadn't given it a thought. . . . A bunch of soup greens, too, Butcher."

The door slammed. Mrs. Farrell was going home.

Mom smiled to herself. Mrs. Johnson wrinkled up the end of her nose and nodded. "Some people," she said, "is jealous whenever anybody else gets anything. I was never that way."

"Me neither," said Mrs. Flannigan, "it'd be just the same with me if it was my Buddy come home from the Navy and they was to give him a big banquet."

"Tommy's all right," Mrs. Johnson said, "and I never believed any of the things they said about him."

Mom said quickly: "What do you mean? What could they say about my Jeff?"

"Oh, about him bein' high-hat and too good for anybody else around and all that."

"Huh!" Mom said, a little fiercely, "some people are just mad because everybody don't lay down in the gutter with them." And she hoped Mrs. Johnson knew who she meant—nobody else but her Florrie, coming in at all hours of the night with different fellows and their autos making a racket and waking up people who had to work for a living.

"Well," said Mrs. Johnson, "I guess I'll be going."

Mom watched her go straight over to Mrs. Farrell's house. Mrs. Flannigan watched her, too. Then Mrs. Flannigan said: "You told her just right—I wonder who the new one is with that fancy car?"

"You mean the yellow car with red trimmings?" Mom said.

Mrs. Flannigan gasped. "My lands—that must be another new one; when did you see that one?"

"Only last night," Mom said. "Louie was having a spell with his stomach and I was up getting him some hot water and I heard them drive up."

"What did they do?" "I don't know. I wasn't watching—it'd keep a person busy if you tried to keep track of that one, and it's no business of mine any how; but the car stood there a long time because Louie was worse than usual and I wasn't asleep yet when I heard it roar and go away."

"I must have been sleeping sound," said Mrs. Flannigan.

"You must have," Mom agreed, and she meant it because there were few things that Mrs. Flannigan missed around that neighborhood, night or day, to say nothing of that sharp-nosed daughter of hers, Myrtle, who had never yet got over it because Mom dealt with Julius.

"It was all I could do," Mom went on, "to keep Jim from yelling out the window at them—and you know the way Jim sleeps."

Mrs. Flannigan smiled sympathetically. "Do I?" she said, "why one night I thought it was the fire whistle and here it was only your mister snoring—of course he works hard. Well, I'll have to get my beans on or Pat'll be home before dinner's ready and say I've beer out gossipin' again."

"Yes," Mom answered, "I hear him sometimes—not that I'm listenin', Miss Flannigan; but he does have a fine loud voice."

"Yes," Mrs. Flannigan said, "well, I've got to get my beans on—and them potatoes the Butcher is sellin' now are like bricks to cook."

Mom stood at the window and watched her go down the street toward her own house and then out straight across to Mrs. Farrell's.

World Still Combatting Malaria

Science Continues Its War Against This Ancient Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

FEW PERSONS are aware of the valuable service rendered the world by the health organization of the League of Nations. This institution is making a world-wide effort to combat disease. It publishes advice and instructions necessary for the control of disease.

An outstanding report of this health organization lies before me as I write. It describes recent advances in the study of malaria.

No one can deny that at one time malaria was a menace to people all over the world. The disease has been known for many centuries. It was first described by Hippocrates, the father of medicine, in the fifth century B. C.

Discover an Extract
It was not until 1640 that any cure could be offered to sufferers from this disease. At that time it was discovered that when an extract made from the cinchona plant was given the victim of malaria great relief was obtained. More than two hundred years passed before it became known that the beneficial effect of the extract was due to the quinine found in the cinchona plant.

Later there followed a series of rapid and important discoveries concerning malaria fever. In 1880 a French army surgeon named Laveran discovered that malaria was caused by a parasite. He called it the "malaria plasmodium."

A few years later Sir Ronald Ross discovered that the disease could be transmitted by the bite of a certain variety of mosquito. The mosquito transmitted the disease only after biting a sufferer from malaria. The parasite developed in the mosquito and could be passed on to its next victim.

Control of the Disease
During the past three decades malaria fever has been controlled by the partial eradication of the mosquito, by the screening of homes in infected areas, and by proper hygienic measures and the isolation of malarial patients. It is true that the disease is not as common as in former years but malaria still continues to be a health problem which concerns the whole world.

Though quinine is extremely beneficial in malaria, medical science has not as yet discovered a drug that will kill the parasite. When this is accomplished relapses of the fever will be prevented and the disease will be more completely controlled.

As I have implied, the spread of malaria is checked by destroying mosquitoes in all malaria infested sections of the world. Continued draining, oiling and sprinkling of mosquito-breeding places are essential. With support of the excellent work now conducted by such organizations as the health organization of the League of Nations and our own health organizations, there will be complete eradication of this old and devastating disease of mankind.

Prize Doll to Paris
WORLAND, Wyo.—A Wyoming doll that won first prize during the recent American Legion convention in Chicago is to be exhibited in Paris with dolls from many countries. The doll, created by Ernest E. Coburn of Freeport, N. Y., represents Chief Washakie, famous leader of the Shoshoni Indians, who ceded valuable lands in Wyoming to the United States government.

"And then there was none," the world soon may be able to sing of the League of Nations if the latter's members keep dropping off one by one.

Only two months in which to do your 1933 Christmas shopping.

Justice Brandeis' seventy-seventh birthday, November 13, will see a new book about him

Dr. Hans Luther, jovial beer-drinker, sauerkraut connoisseur, and Ambassador of Germany, has been selected by a national jury to be the subject of a new book by a nationally known weekly for a sum in excess of $25,000. . . . While alive, Hoover repeatedly refused lucrative offers for his memoirs. . . . The notes he left are voluminous, but unorganized. Many are undated. . . . Publication will begin as soon as they have been put in sequence and edited. . . . Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will soon begin a series of weekly syndicated newspaper articles. . . . Colonel Amos Woodcock, Federal Probation Director during the Hoover regime, has written a book on his experiences in this post. . . . One of the high lights of the volume is the story of the attempt by a group of New Jersey Republican leaders, headed by Senator "Ham" Kean, to force the dismissal of Commander John D. Pennington, arch-foe of the New Jersey rum ring. . . . For the first time since the legalization of 3.2 per cent beer, business shows a decline. . . . Sales for September were 10 percent below those of August. . . . However, this seasonal decline is appreciably less than that for the same period in 1918, the last year before prohibition.

student opinion

Do you think that admission prices for students to athletic contests at Circleville high school are too low?

Floyd Dunlap:

Yes and no. If athletics are not very sound financially, I think the students will try to help them within their means. But on the other hand if the admission price is beyond what they think they can pay they will stay away.

I think a medium should be decided upon that is not too low for the athletic association and still not beyond the reach of the students.

Anne Thacher:

The price is just about right. One can see a show for the same amount, and an athletic contest is as good if not better than most shows. Prices should not be raised for a nickel or a dime's difference might keep away some people who are really interested and enjoy the game.

Harold Sharpe:

The price is all right the way it is. There are many people who might not come if the prices were higher. The attendance if not any too large now, and we want Circleville to have a good showing at its athletic contests.

However, if there is a deficit in the treasury of the athletic association it would be justified in increasing the price of admission.

Dale Ankrum:

If the prices were any lower the upkeep of the team would be impossible. Most students that go to the athletic contests have a lot of school spirit, and would continue to attend if the prices were higher. The people who do not have school spirit would not go regardless of how low the admission fee might be.

Girl Reserves

The meeting of the Girl Reserves Thursday was in charge of the president, Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick.

The Circleville group of the Girl Reserves is planning a joint winter roast at the Riverside park on the Chillicothe pike with the Chillicothe group. It probably will be Monday, though no definite word has yet been received.

The club has been divided into two groups, the Athletic and Nature, and the Music and Dramatics group. The former group under Miss Ryan has 27 members. They will hold their first meeting at the home of Charlotte Moore on Thursday, Nov. 9.

The Music and Dramatics group under Miss Tootie has 13 members. They will hold their meeting at Mary Curtin's on the same date.

Martha Mossbarger read a paper, "Preparation for Leisure," at Thursday's meeting.

FACULTY ENJOYS PICNIC THURSDAY

A glorious autumn evening and a jolly good time marked the social gathering of the teachers of the High School building Thursday evening at the Charles M. Niles farm along the Scioto.

Nineteen were present, the guests of honor being Master Gene Gephart and little Miss Barbara Herberholz.

The steak supper was under the supervision of Miss Pigman, Miss Brown, and Miss Yates.

This, the camp fire, and the group singing and games which Miss Tootie inspired, were the features of an evening which every one present was loath to bring to a close.

GLEE CLUBS NAME ELIZABETH DOWDEN AND W. ASHBROOK

To Work On Music For Operetta To Be Given Later This Year.

The girls' Glee Club and Boys' Glee club both held their elections of officers this week.

The Girls' Glee club elected Elizabeth Dowden president, while William Ashbrook was chosen to head the boys' organization.

The two clubs will have a social meeting together every six weeks. The plan for financing the Girls' club is to pay ten cents at the first meeting and five cents at succeeding meetings. The Boys' Glee club has decided to pay 25 cents at the first meeting and ten cents per month thereafter.

This money will be used for new music and expenditures for the social meetings.

The clubs will work on the music for an operetta which they are planning to give together this year.

Fading Fall

OUR bounteous Nature gives us Fall;

A gift supreme in beauty rare, imbues us with the gypsy call To frisk in crisp November air.

But soon Fall's beauty will have died;
Old Autumn will have passed away;
But in her wake will swiftly ride
King Winter for his blustrous stay.

—Charles Diehlman.

Is Hallowe'en Fun?

It seems that during the Hallowe'en season a boy will do many things he wouldn't do otherwise.

This Sophomore boy was no exception. He was talking to the Junior girl at her doorstep on E. Union-st. Suddenly he began making artistic designs upon her windows. (in soap).

At this moment the grandpa and the grandma of the maiden appeared upon the scene. A matter of only moments later Louis was erasing his "artistry" via the water and cloth method.

LAST C.B.L. GAME TO BE PLAYED ON LOCAL GRIDIRON

Circleville High Plays Marysville Here Friday, November 10.

GAME STARTS AT 3:00

To Have No Place In Fight For Championship.

The story of the football season of the Central Buckeye league is pretty well told today with but one game in the entire league left to play, that between Circleville and Marysville here next Friday.

Yesterday C. H. S. met Westerville on the latter's gridiron. Bexley clashed with Delaware, while Marysville was busy at Grandview.

Yesterday's games had a definite bearing on the championship of the Central Buckeye league. Previous to that date Bexley and Westerville were in deadlock for league leadership.

Last year Bexley held high position of the league while Westerville was a comparatively weak team.

The only league game left will have no place in the fight for championship. In Marysville, C. H. S. clashes with a team which holds a place of isolation at the bottom of the league.

A summary of the league standing up until yesterday follows:

	W	T	L	P
Bexley	3	0	1	6
Westerville	3	0	1	6
Grandview	2	1	1	5
Delaware	2	0	2	4
Circleville	0	1	2	1
Marysville	0	0	3	0

"Hi-Y" College

For the benefit of the new members entering the club the constitution of the Hi-Y was read and discussed at the last several meetings.

The club decided that some new amendments should be made and others revised. A committee consisting of Jake Towers, David Harmon, and John Robinson was appointed by president Reichelderfer to make further suggestions regarding the constitution.

The program committee for November is William Ashbrook, Tom Kirwin, and Robert May.

The Senior class held its second meeting of the year Wednesday afternoon to select the style of invitations for commencement.

The design chosen is the same as that of the class rings. It is made by the Spies Co. of Chicago and is to be purchased from L. M. Butch. The price of the invitations is nine cents each.

The class president, William Ashbrook, estimated the receipts from the Senior booth at the Pumpkin show to be about $45, and appointed a committee to have charge of the booth at the Marysville-C. H. S. football game to be held on the local gridiron, November 10.

Seventy four members of the Young Ladies' Bible class of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Westminster Bible class of the Presbyterian church enjoyed a delightful party Friday evening, when the former class was hostess to the Presbyterian class in the M. E. church basement.

Silent prayer in memory of Mrs. Charles Eichinger and Mrs. Louise Eichinger, who were members, opened the meeting. A welcome address was given by Mrs. Edwin Shanton of the M. E. class which was followed by an entertaining ice-breaker, in charge of the program leaders, Mrs. Carl Bennett and Mrs. N. E. Reichelderfer.

Hughy Bachenstos Jr., of Washington C. H., a very talented young musician, entertained with two piano numbers, "Minuet" by Paderewski and "My Foot-ball Hero." Later in the evening he rendered "Butterfly" by Grieg and "Collection of Big Ten Marches."

Rev. and Mrs. Herman Sayre were then presented to the classes, Rev. Sayre giving a few remarks.

Marion Sensenbrenner with Hunter Chambers at the piano pleased his audience with several selections, "In an Old-fashioned Town" and "Others."

Following a reading, "The Absent-minded Minister" by Miss Nellie Riffle and piano numbers by Mr. Bachenstos, the program was concluded with two more solos by Mr. Sensenbrenner. He sang "Gleanings in the Gloamin'" and "Smile Through Your Tears" and "Smile Through."

A game in charge of the program leaders followed and a delicious lunch served under the chairmanship of Mrs. Harold Grant brought the pleasant evening to a close.

"HOLD ME TIGHT"

Did You Know

By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT the colored residents of Circleville observed the official ratification of the 15th amendment, that part of the Constitution which gave them the right to vote, with a great eight-day celebration, beginning March 8, 1870. J. M. Meek and L. N. Lucas were the leaders of a committee which was responsible for the celebration. The event was featured by services in the colored churches, open air meetings with speeches, and finally a great supper served in the streets of the east end of the city. The following resolution was adopted:

"We, the colored citizens of Circleville and vicinity, hail with gratitude the intelligence of the ratification of the 15th amendment to the Constitution of the United States. We believe it is through the Providence of God and the indefatigable efforts of the Union Republican Party that this great result has been accomplished."

"Therefore, let it be resolved that we endorse the principles of the Republican party, and we pledge our undivided support so long as it remains true to the principles of liberty, equality and justice."

That "pound parties" were leading forms of entertainment in Circleville during the 1870's. Those who were invited to such events brought at least one pound of food to the party. About this same period, velocipedes, (forerunners of the bicycle), began to make their appearance here. Incidentally, the cost of these velocipedes was on the average of $1 per pound. That is, a vehicle for a 60-pound lad would cost about $60.

That "laughing gas," used in the art of dentistry, was first brought to Circleville in February, 1868. E. D. Moore, a dentist, who had his office on E. Main-st, brought the anaesthetic from Pittsburgh. Concerning the gas, the following appeared in The Herald of the time:

"We are still using this pleasant anaesthetic for painless extraction of teeth with remarkable success. Having given it in hundreds of cases, there is no ill effect. The whole operation of giving the gas and extracting the teeth is over in three to five minutes and at once the effects pass off, leaving no headache or nausea."

THAT an all time record for robberies and attempted thefts is believed to have been established in Circleville during the week of Jan. 4-8, 1869. The following report, contained in The Herald of the time lends credence to the belief that Circleville had its "bad men," even 70 years ago. The report follows:

"MONDAY NIGHT: The thieves visited the cellar of W. J. Weaver and carried off various articles, including a barrel of flour."

"TUESDAY: The robbers entered the warehouse belonging to James Smart and Co., broke open his safe and abstracted greenbacks in the amount of $90."

"WEDNESDAY: They broke a pane of glass out of a window in T. J. Epp's Boot and Shoe Store and helped themselves to a couple pairs of boots worth $27."

"THURSDAY: They entered the Scioto House and visited several of the rooms where persons were sleeping and managed to get $3 in change."

"During the same night they visited Tom Feeny's grocery but were fired on and frightened away. They also attempted to break into the house of Dr. Jones but were discovered and compelled to make a hasty retreat. Making an attempt to enter T. K. Brunner's Jewelry Store, they awakened George Brunner, who was sleeping in the back room, and he promptly fired his revolver and they took to their heels."

That the first agitation for Women's suffrage in Circleville was begun on March 3, 1870, when Mrs. M. V. Longlev, lecturer and agent of the Ohio Women's Suffrage Association, visited here and delivered a speech at Peck's Hall. She was accompanied by a New York worker.

FEDERAL MEN ACT Textile Worker Admits Attempt In South

A plot to abduct the youthful wife of Richard J. Reynolds Jr., heir to the twenty million dollar tobacco estate, had developed a degree of local interest today. Mrs. Reynolds is the daughter of John Dillard, president of the Sturmdill Co., Union-rd. Mr. Dillard is a frequent visitor here.

Mrs. Reynolds before her marriage to Richard J. Reynolds Jr. was Elizabeth McCaw Dillard. They were married in Winston-Salem, Jan. 1, 1933.

Authorities today had moved to prosecute John Lanier, 35-year-old textile worker arrested by federal agents as the author of a plot to abduct Mrs. Reynolds. Lanier was trapped as he was about to pick up a decoy package designated in threatening letters to Reynolds. He will be charged with extortion by threats to kidnap the beautiful sportswoman.

Lengthy questioning of the prisoner by federal department of justice operatives brought an admission that he had written two letters to Reynolds demanding $10,000 in cash if Mrs. Reynolds was to remain unmolested.

The first letter was received on Oct. 28 and the second a few days later. They directed that Reynolds place $10,000 in a package fifteen feet from the sidewalk at the corner of Dunleith street and East Third street yesterday morning at 1 o'clock.

Reynolds appeared to his attorney, Stratton Covner and Sheriff Transon Scott. They in turn communicated with the department of justice and two federal agents were sent from Washington.

Placing the decoy package of bills at the designated spot, the officers hid nearby and waited until 6 a. m. yesterday until Lanier walked by several times, hesitated and then picked up the package.

Lanier was arrested and questioned secretly all day. His wife likewise was questioned, but the textile worker in a statement made last night absolved her of all blame.

Mrs. Reynolds meanwhile was being carefully watched at the family home, Reynolds. She is reported to be in a delicate condition of health.

Garden of Betrayal of Jesus is Murder Scene

JERUSALEM, Nov. 4. — The biblically-famous garden of Gethsemane and the Mount of Olives were the scene of a thorough investigation today the mysterious slaying of an American dancer and an Indian moslem, apparently her guide.

The victims' bodies were found in an olive grove near the garden, historically famous as the scene of Christ's betrayal by Judas and lying at the foot of the Mount of Olives.

The girl was Carol Niedergess-wass, 25, known on the stage as Carol Winter and as Joan Winter. She was born in Seattle, Wash., and her parents now are believed to be living in New York.

The man, Manammet Kirmani, was believed to be from Madras, a member of the Indian civil service. Police were completely baffled as to a motive for the crime. Miss Niedergesswass had been shot in the head and her companion in the back. Doctors said each had been dead about 48 hours when their bodies were found.

It was possible the pair were victims of sniping by Arabs in one of the frequent outbreaks of shooting which have occurred in the vicinity during the past ten days, but discovery of but one fatal wound on each body tended to indicate outright murder.

Boy Scout Department Of Pumpkin Show Urged

A plea for a Boy Scout department of the annual Pumpkin Show has been received today by Mack Parrett, Jr., secretary of the event, from Kenneth A. Connelly, director of education and publicity of the Central Ohio Area of Boy Scouts of America.

Mr. Parrett, heartily in favor of the suggestion, intends to present the matter to the Pumpkin Show directors at the proper time.

The plea was made in a report to Mr. Parrett of activities of Scouts in the last show. Mr. Connelly said: "My recommendations for another year would be that a regular size concession tent 10x12 be put up so that a large table and sufficient room for stalls, stretchers, cot and other equipment will be available. My second suggestion is that a department of the Pumpkin show be created for the Boy Scouts. This would certainly help to make the Pumpkin Show 'Bigger and Better.' Several county fairs have done this with very fine results."

LISTS RULES

A number of rules were listed by Mr. Connelly which he would have incorporated in the Boy Scout department.

Mr. Connelly's report of the Scout activities in the past Pumpkin Show follows:

October 4, 12 boys, 49 hours. October 5, 23 boys, one leader, 152 hours.

October 6, 28 boys, two leaders, 212 hours.

October 7, 33 boys, two leaders, 188 hours.

C. C. C. YOUTHS ESCAPE INJURY IN CRASH HERE

Bus Loaded With 20 Cincinnati - Bound Yuths Hits East-Bound Train

NOISE IS BLAMED Disaster Evaded by About Five Seconds

Twenty members of the civilian Conservation corps, all Cincinnatians, escaped the clutches of death by five seconds, Friday evening, when the bus in which they were riding from Camp Hocking to Cincinnati ran into the tender of an east-bound Norfolk & Western train. The accident happened at 6:25 p. m. at the W. Main-st crossing.

The youths obtained another bus later in the evening and resumed their journey. All were going home after serving their six months enlistment in the Civilian Conservation corps. Many of them had re-enlisted and were going home only for furlough over the weekend.

ONLY FEW BRUISED

First reports uptown were that a number of them had been killed but as soon as police officers and others appeared it was learned no one was seriously hurt. A few of the youths sustained bruises when thrown to the floor of the bus.

The railroad gates were not down but the warning bell was ringing and witnesses say the engine's whistle was blowing when the truck approached the track. James Harden, 34, of Laurelville Rt. 2, owner and driver of the bus, said confusion within the bus prevented him from hearing the train. He started to drive onto the railroad right-of-way before he saw the locomotive. Fortunately the driver turned his bus south, in the same direction as the train was going.

The vehicle did not turn over. The train of about 100 empty coal cars, was engineered by C. T. Leeper, 1311 19th-ave, Columbus, with J. W. Adams, of Portsmouth, as conductor. The engine traveled about three blocks before coming to a stop.

Had the truck been driven on the track five seconds sooner, the toll of dead and seriously injured would undoubtedly have been high.

Another bus filled with "forest army" boys was following that driven by Harden. It went on to Cincinnati.

TRAIN NOT DAMAGED

The front end of Harden's bus was badly damaged and the vehicle was towed to the E. E. Clifton garage. The train was not damaged and went on its way after a short while.

Officers Raymond Smith, Fred Fitzpatrick and Tom McManamy investigated the wreck, which is the second to occur at the W. Main-st crossing in the last two months, the other being a truck carrying concrete blocks to the new post office at Springfield. The truck, heavily-loaded, stalled in the path of an east-bound train and was demolished.

GOVERNORS TO AGAIN APPEAL

Conference Leads To Belief Plan Is Rejected; Further Study Expected.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4. — A new appeal to President Roosevelt to order price fixing for farm products was to be made today by five governors from states where the farm strike is smouldering.

While the president is sympathetic toward the aims of the farm state governors, their hope of persuading the administration to adopt their plan had been shattered.

The governors, after a day and a half of conferences, construed objections raised by administration spokesmen to constitute a flat rejection of their immediate price-fixing plan.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, however, preferred to say that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration was in sympathy with the objective of the governors and stood willing to consider the plan further in detail.

With the governors warning that the farm strike movement may become a calamity, Wallace and other officials were confident in the success of the present plan.

State Amendments, Mayor and Council Races to Prove Attraction With Polls Opening at 6:30 a. m.; Candidates Put on Finishing Touches Over Week-end; Officials Receive Instructions.

Officials of the various precinct election booths of the city and county have received their instructions from the board of elections, supplies have been distributed to each and everything is in readiness for the opening of the polls Tuesday morning in what promises to be a momentous election.

Interest is not confined to only one feature, but many different problems will be presented to the voters for consideration. Foremost, as far as local interest is concerned, is in the race for mayor, city board of education, council, justice of peace and constable.

Contests are found in each case and the last few days have seen much activity in the chase for every office.

In council the predominant issue is "Do you or do you not favor municipal ownership of utilities?" The question is foremost because an engineer's report is ready for submission in open council and the details of this report are expected to have much to do with the city's history in the next year or two.

A survey of candidates for council shows that nearly all councilmen are using as their campaign plank, "We are for lower rates in local utilities and unless the private utilities abide by what we think is fair, we are for building a municipal plant or plants."

The Circleville Citizens' league is expected to take action within the next day or two to either stand on the various candidates for the council jobs.

From the survey of council candidates it is certain that many race discussions will be the topic in the council which meets in January, even more so, in fact, than the one now being waged.

VILLAGERS AGITATED

All the county's villagers are their own contests with the one at Ashville promising to be the most to-be-forgotten soon.

E. E. Fraunfelder finds four other candidates seeking his job with the result that much political activity is prevalent there. The village council and the board of education are also hot-beds of activity. Williamsport has its race and so do several others.

Several private fights are being made in the various townships with trustees and school board members being elected.

The polls open at 6:30 a. m. and close 12 hours later. S. T. Rice, chairman of the board of elections, pointed out Saturday that the law calls for the polls to open at 5:30 a. m. Central standard time and that no mention is made of Eastern standard time which governs the greater part of the state.

More than 100 absent and disabled voters' ballots have been received.

The Presbyterian Congregation extends its most cordial congratulations to St. Phillips Episcopal Church on its celebration of its Centennial. As it has borne a faithful witness in the past so may it continue, increasing in power and service. We rejoice in the fine fellowship of its rectors and its people. May the occasion be one of joy and of renewed consecration.

After the debacle of the Disarmament Conference in Europe many of us threw up our hands in disgust. We said, "Let them kill themselves if they want to. We'll have nothing to do with their troubles. Keep out." Now that is easier said than done. How do we know we can keep out. How do we know what circumstances may drag us in? We are too ready to say "Let them kill themselves."

The future of brotherhood where there has been hatred and antagonism is not an easy process. It is not easy for us to be kindly even at our distance. Jesus said, "Love your enemies. Pray for them that despitefully use you." God is looking for the man who will pray, who will carry on his heart the burden of a world full of strife and hatred who will feel the pain and sorrow of it as Christians there is no room for vindictiveness and hatred, or even stand-offishness.

Trust we cannot settle so great problems, but God can and will when we turn to Him. Your church is working and praying for world peace. Join in. Go to church tomorrow. Take a friend.

I. The Controversy in the Church at Antioch (vv. 1-5).

The occasion of the controversy was the return of Paul and Barnabas from their first missionary journey. Upon their return they gathered the church together and rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles. The difficulty was a most serious one for it threatened the disruption of the church into a Jewish and Gentile division. The point at issue was not the admission of the Gentile into the church. That had been settled some years before when Peter received Cornelius and his household. The question now was: On what ground could they be received? Should Gentile converts be required to keep the Mosaic law as a condition of salvation? That which brought this issue into prominence was the coming of certain men from Jerusalem who declared, "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses ye cannot be saved" (v. 1). The problem was so difficult that Paul and Barnabas were unable to put these men to silence. The brethren at Antioch decided to refer the matter to the mother church at Jerusalem. Accordingly, Paul, Barnabas, and others were sent as a deputation to Jerusalem. On the way they passed through Phoenicia and Samaria, declaring the news of the conversion of the Gentiles, which was received with much joy.

II. The Deliberations of the Council (vv. 6-21).

1. Peter's address (vv. 6-11). He argued that God had borne witness of his acceptance of the Gentiles by giving his Holy Spirit unto them as unto the Jews (Acts 10:34-47). Since, therefore, God had not put a difference, it would be folly for them to do so. God's action in sending the Spirit unto them was the unanswerable proof that no distinction was to be made.

2. Paul and Barnabas rehearse their experience (vv. 12). They told how that God had set his seal of approval on their preaching of salvation by grace through faith apart from works, by the working of signs and wonders through them.

3. The argument of James (vv. 13-21). He showed how the truth declared by Peter harmonized with the prophecy of Amos (Amos 9:11-15). He made it clear that the reception of the Gentiles was not in conflict with God's plan, but in strict harmony therewith. God's plan, as set forth in James' speech, is as follows:

a. God would visit the Gentiles to take out from among them a people for his name (v. 14). This is what is now going on—the worldwide preaching of the gospel and the calling out of the church.

b. After the completion and removal of the church from the world, Israel as a nation will be converted and restored to their land with all its privileges by the Lord himself upon his return (vv. 16, 17a). The building again of the tabernacle of David means the restoration of the Davidic throne. Gabriel, in announcing to Mary the birth of Jesus, said, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David" (Luke 1:32).

c. This will be followed by the conversion of the world through the essentials and non-essentials when attempting to settle difficulties?

Clericus says, "Nearly all troubles, family, civic, national and international, could be peacefully settled if the opposing parties would meet in conference, having an open mind, willing to get a wider horizon and a border view. This is the way for world peace and much is to be said in favor of the League of Nations and the World Court."

Lesson Prayer, "Give us a true conception of pure freedom and a spirit of brotherly love that we will surrender non-essential for the sake of harmony, peace and goodwill."

 Church Appreciation Day will be observed in the 2,000 churches of the Nazarene tomorrow, the Reverend Pusey pastor of the local Church of the Nazarene, announced. Certain features of the history of the church will be emphasized on this fourth Silver Jubilee Anniversary celebration Sunday.
 The official beginning of the church was twenty-five years ago at Pilot Point, Texas, where the Pentecostal Churches of America and the Holiness Church of Christ became a part of the present organization.
 Progress attained in the quarter century covers a wide field, now operating 2,000 churches scattered throughout the United States and Canada. These churches, parsonages, as well as other property of the church, now have a value of 13 1/2 million dollars. Schools and colleges owned by the church account for 1 1/2 million dollars. The revenue of the church totals 3 1/2 million dollars annually.
 Among the institutions maintained by the church are six colleges, two junior colleges and Bible schools. These points of learning are: Eastern Nazarene College, Wollaston, Mass.; Trevecca College, Nashville, Tenn.; Olivet College, Olivet, Ill.; Bethany-Peniel College, Bethany, Okla.; Northwest Nazarene College, Nampa, Idaho; Pasadena College, Pasadena, Calif.; Brescia College, Hutchinson, Kans.; and Northern Bible College, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada, the latter two being Bible schools.
 In addition the church operates three hospitals—Brescia Hospital, China; Raleigh Fitkin Memorial Hospital, Africa; Nazarene Sanitarium, Nampa, Idaho, as well as Rest Cottages at Kansas City and Pilot Point, Texas.

CHURCH INVITES YOU

There are times when the distinction between virtue and vice in its modest form is very faint; ever and anon arises the question what is wrong and what is right? A technique is necessary for sharpening correct judgments. Worship proves competent for this.

Everyone who prays knows what it means to have a perplexed mind which gradually becomes quiet and assured while worshipping. New judgments and conclusions are reached, new points of view attained. That must have been in the mind of Paul when he prayed "that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you a spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him." Why not accept the invitation and COME TO THE HOUSE OF WORSHIP NEXT SUNDAY?

TIGERS DEFEATED AS LEAGUE ENDS IN TIE

Collier Rips Red and Black Line to Shreds in 33-12 Game; Bexley Gains Tie For Lead by Defeating Delaware, 7-0; Local Tie With Grandview Keeps Bobcats Out of First Place.

Playing valiantly but unable to top a round-shouldered youth named Collier who did everything but steal the shoes off Coach Pete Herberholz' athletes, the Tigers went down to a 33-12 defeat at the hands of Westerville's great team, Friday. The game was played in the 'dry capital' before a large crowd.

The Tigers played as well as they have all year but they were unable to cope with the slashing, driving attack of the Ballenger-coached youths.

The first period ended 13-6 and the half found the score 20-6.

The Red and Black touchdowns were scored by Fred Grant and Gaines Hill, the former on a fumble back of the goal and the latter on a plunge.

Westerville's victory gives that team a tie with Bexley for the Central Buckeye league championship. Grandview finished in third place, being kept out of a tie for first by playing a scoreless draw with the local team.

Westerville's loan defeat came at the hands of Bexley, 7-6. Grandview turned the tables on Bexley by a two-touchdown margin. The only game the Grandview Bobcats lost was to Westerville by a 3-0 score, a field goal in the final minute turning the trick.

Grandview had an easy time defeating Marysville, 27-0, at Marysville Friday afternoon and since the Jerry Kingsmore team comes here next Friday in the closing game of the season it looks like the Tigers will be able to evade the cellar spot for which they seemed destined.

A recovered fumble led to a Bexley, 7-0, victory over Delaware in the college town Friday afternoon, the break came in the third period with Miller, Bexley center, covering the free ball. A shovel-pass gained 18 yards and Hoffman, fullback, crashed the line for the touchdown.

Other gridiron results of Friday follow:

Columbus West, 39; Central, 6. Columbus South, 38; Urbana, 0. Millersport, 12; Logan, 8. Greenfield, 6; Xenia Home, 6. Wooster, 14; Millersburg, 7. Medina, 25; Akron East, 13. Portsmouth, 26; Cleveland, Glenview, 7. Pomeroy, 20; Gallipolis, 0. Columbus Academy, 42; Gahanna, 0. Worthington, 13; Upper Arlington, 7.

FAVOR 'BUCKS' TO TURN BACK INDIANA TEAM

COLUMBUS, Nov. 4.—Indiana, spoiler of Ohio State's title hopes in 1932, will meet the Buckeyes in Ohio stadium at 2 p.m. today in the most uncertain Big Ten game of the season thus far.

Ohio State and Indiana have prepared for this game in different ways. The Hoosiers have had two weeks of rest, a fortnight in which their crippled have had a chance to recover. The Buckeyes have played a hard, thumping game of football against Northwestern and then set out to change their offense on three days' notice. In other words, Ohio State is attempting to do in a week what the football experts consider is a season's work.

TWO FACTORS

The outcome of this game should depend on one or two things: how effective a passing attack Billy Hayes has built for the Hoosiers, and how quickly Ohio State's men can adapt themselves to their new formation.

For the first time since the Minnesota game, Indiana will have its entire squad available. Four driving backs will be ready to go. Dauer, Veller, Huffman, and Walker, a heavy backfield around which Coach Hayes has built what he calls a "basketball" attack.

With two 200 pounders at the ends in Ettore Antonini, and Fitz Lyons, Hayes has built a passing attack which will test the Ohio State secondary.

Although Stan Pincura, the Northwestern sophomore, played well against Northwestern last Saturday when he replaced Carl Cramer, it is probable that Cramer will be back in the starting lineup against Indiana. A fast, shifty runner, Cramer is especially suited for the new attack Coach Williamson is building. The end situation is in a middle. Co-Capt. Sid Gillman is out with an injured knee, and Padgett has not been showing to a advantage.

Every voter has a right to know how its public servants spend their tax-money. The point in question is, "How did the County Board of Education stand on the amount of taxes it needed to pay expenses?" The answer is that Messrs. Hoover, Dick and Young voted to raise the annual budget three hundred dollars ($300.00) for the fiscal year of 1933 for the expenses of the County Board of Education. Messrs. Meyers and Barch voted "No" to increase it, as they are heartily in favor of lower taxes.

Roosevelt a Factor

A WHITE HOUSE statement that the president is "taking no part, active or otherwise, in the New York municipal election campaign can be accepted without weakening belief that the Roosevelt influence will have an effect on the outcome.

The part taken by the president was when Postmaster General Farley—Mr. Roosevelt's political guide—brought out McKee as a candidate for mayor. That the postmaster general would have done this without the approval of his chief is not thought of. The Farley sponsorship is thus interpreted in New York, with attempts to capitalize it being made by the McKee forces. McKee himself in a recent campaign speech was quoted as declaring that "a vote for LaGuardia is a vote against Roosevelt; a vote for McKee is a vote for Roosevelt."

The wisdom of the president's permitting himself to become involved in the fight is questionable, but no white house statement merely denying that he is taking part in it will change the fact that his administration is an issue. A direct statement from him favoring McKee would, of course, have greater effect than his passive approval of the McKee candidacy. But this he will not make.

Should McKee be defeated, it would be hailed by opponents of the administration as a defeat for the president.

There is an obvious danger in that possibility but one which was invited when Mr. Roosevelt stepped into the picture.

If a controlled dollar means the kind that will stick around longer we are in favor of it.

Care is Needed

MICHIGAN'S experience in trying to cope with a crime wave which is common to the country may serve as a warning to other states contemplating preventive steps without giving due consideration to constitutional limitations.

The supreme court of Michigan has declared invalid a so-called public-enemy law enacted in 1931 and aimed particularly at racketeering. The court declared that hoodlums could not be held guilty of criminality merely on the basis of their reputation. Under the new statute, "proof of recent reputation" of having engaged in an illicit business was made prima facie evidence of guilt.

Such a provision, said the state's highest court, was in conflict with the constitutional mandate that a defendant is presumed to be innocent until proved guilty.

The great increase in crime has caused many radical proposals to be put forward as remedies. Such a situation gives rise to the danger that materialized in Michigan.

New laws may be necessary in combating crime, but care must be exercised that none of the fundamental rights guaranteed citizens under the constitution are invaded or violated.

THAT'S MY BOY!

AUTHOR OF "HUDDLE"

SYNOPSIS

"Big Jeff" Randolph, now in his second year on the Thorndyke variety and one of the nation's greatest football stars, has had a brilliant grid career ever since his high school days in little Athens, a mid-west factory town, where Mom and Pop and the rest of the family are now listening over the radio to the game between their boy's great eastern university and Indiana State. "Big Jeff" is just Tommy back home which he visits on vacations and starts with his social-sartorial splendor. He's gone somewhat high-hat with the seal of Thorndyke upon him and has drifted away from Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the richest man in Athens—the owner of the glass-works in which his Pop labors. "Big Jeff" stars in the victory over Indiana State, 7-0, which game was witnessed by the Whitneys and heard via radio by Mom, Pop, Uncle Louie and the neighbors. . . . At the Stadium, "Jeff" introduces Miss Whitney, his high school sweetheart, to Elaine Winthrop, his college crush, the erstwhile little Tommy affecting a broad English accent. . . . Back home Uncle Louie banked his hopes for the postmaster ship on Al Smith, but you know what happened in '28. . . . Mom, and even Pop, felt sorry. . . . Athens plans to banquet his great grid hero during Christmas vacation and Pop is invited to make a speech on that occasion. . . .

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Then Mom told him he'd better be careful because it wasn't supposed to be that kind of a speech but just to talk about Tommy; but Pop got up and began to walk around and think of other things he would tell them because one of the things wrong with this country was that people were afraid to speak up to the monied people and that this time they were going to hear plenty from a man who wasn't afraid to tell them. He'd tell them about the eight-hour day and about the bullshoveels that were running the country and how they should all be sent back to the old country.

"No," said Mom, almost crying, "you'll disgrace us all and Tommy, too, and everybody will get mad."

Then Pop began to get mad at Mom and said she was like all the rest, afraid of the reform people and the monied people; and he'd tell the Booster Club too, what he thought of them and that what the town needed was some men with good business heads; and he'd tell the Chamber of Commerce about spying on a man and how much money he owed and all that. Pop had wanted to tell them all that he thought for a long time and this was his chance and nobody was going to stop him.

He got louder and louder and while he was talking to himself in a name Uncle Louie; and when he found out what was up he said that he was the one to make the speech, not Pop, because he had been in politics all his life and knew a lot of big men and had sat on the same platform with Bryan when he had spoken in town in nineteen-eight, and knew how to make a speech better than Pop who was only a workman.

Then Pop hit the ceiling and said if he hadn't been a workman Uncle Louie would have starved long ago because he had never earned an honest dollar in his life and was one of the town's grafters and he got up to talk. And Uncle Louie jumped up and said that Pop would have to prove that in court because he would sue him for libel.

and Pop said Uncle Louie had been going to sue somebody all his life but had never sued anybody yet because he was afraid to set his foot in a court room for fear he'd never get out.

Mom got them quieted down and finally Pop said he hadn't really meant that Uncle Louie was a crook because if he was he'd have something to fall back on instead of wasting his life waiting for the Democrats to get in; and Uncle Louie said Pop wasn't so smart himself, he'd have his own home and Pop said there was a good reason for that; and Uncle Louie said if he wasn't welcome around there he wouldn't stay and Pop said he could suit himself.

Then they both got quiet and Mom brought in some coffee and cake and they all had some.

"Anyhow," Pop started again, "how could you make a speech when you've never even been invited?"

"I was invited to banquets in this town before you knew what a banquet was," Uncle Louie said.

"Then they got started again and Mom couldn't stop them but, as luck happened, Pete came in then. "Pipe down," he said, "before the fire department comes up and turns the hose on both of you!"

Then they did quiet down and went to bed.

"Were the neighbors listening?" Mom asked Pete.

"Who cares?" Pete said. "We're paying the rent."

But the next day, at Butcher Brown's, Mom knew they had been listening; for no sooner had she come in than Mrs. Johnson asked: "Was somebody sick at your house last night, Miss Randolph? I thought I heard a noise."

"Oh," Mom said, "that was Jim practicing his speech, I guess. I told him maybe he was talking too loud because the neighbors around are easily disturbed." How did she like that?

"I thought I heard Louie, too," Mrs. Farrell said, picking over the lettuce as if everybody wanted to eat what she had handled.

"Oh," said Mom, "Louie was helping Jim—Louie's a great speech-maker, you know."

"Yes," Mrs. Farrell said, "Louie's a great talker, all right." She laughed, like a sick hen cackling.

"Yes," Mom answered, laughing. "I've often told him he should have been an insurance man, the way they talk a leg off a person."

"But," said Mrs. Johnson, "what's the speech about?"

The other ladies listened carefully, although Mrs. Farrell pretended to be picking over the tomatoes. Mom took her time.

"Oh," she said, "I thought you knew, I guess it ain't been in the papers yet, though."

"I ain't seen nothing," Mrs. Johnson said.

"Why," Mom answered, as if it were nothing, "it's just a banquet—have you got a good soup bone today, Butcher?"

"What kind of a banquet?" Mrs. Flannigan persisted.

"Oh," Mom said, "the town is going to give a big banquet for Jeff when he comes home Christmas."

"A feed, huh," Butcher Brown asked, "where you going to buy your meat?"

Mom laughed. "Oh, you'll have to see the Committee, Butcher, I'm just an invited guest—naturally, they'd invite his mother and father."

"Is it free?" Mrs. Flannigan asked.

"Oh no," Mom said, "except for the invited guests like the mayor and the school board and me and Pop—I suppose everybody at the head table will get in free."

"My," said Mrs. Johnson, "sounds like a big affair. What're you going to wear?"

"I don't know," Mom said, "I hadn't given it a thought. . . . A bunch of soup greens, too, Butcher."

The door slammed. Mrs. Farrell was going home.

Mom smiled to herself. Mrs. Johnson wrinkled up the end of her nose and nodded. "Some people," she said, "is jealous whenever anybody else gets anything. I was never that way."

"Me neither," said Mrs. Flannigan, "it'd be just the same with me if it was my Buddy come home from the Navy and they was to give him a big banquet."

"Tommy's all right," Mrs. Johnson said, "and I never believed any of the things they said about him."

Mom said quickly: "What do you mean? What could they say about my Jeff?"

"Oh, about him bein' high-hat and too good for anybody else around and all that."

"Huh!" Mom said, a little fiercely. "Some people are just mad because everybody don't lay down in the gutter with them." And she hoped Mrs. Johnson knew who she meant—nobody else but her Florrie, coming in at all hours of the night with different fellows and their autos making a racket and waking up people who had to work for a living.

"Well," said Mrs. Johnson, "I guess I'll be going."

Mom watched her go straight over to Mrs. Farrell's house. Mrs. Flannigan watched her, too. Then Mrs. Flannigan said: "You told her just right—I wonder who the new one is with that fancy car?"

"You mean the yellow car with red trimmings?" Mom said.

Mrs. Flannigan gasped. "My lands—that must be another new one; when did you see that one?"

"Only last night," Mom said. "Louie was having a spell with his stomach and I was up getting him some hot water and I heard them drive up."

"What did they do?"

"I don't know, I wasn't watching—it'd keep a person busy if you tried to keep track of that one; and the business of mine anyhow; but the car stood there a long time because Louie was worse than usual and I wasn't asleep yet when I heard it roar and go away."

"I must have been a sleeping sound," said Mrs. Flannigan.

"You must have," Mom agreed, and she meant it because there were few things that Mrs. Flannigan missed around that neighborhood, night or day, to say nothing of that sharp-nosed daughter of hers, Myrtle, who had never yet got over it because Mom dealt with Julius.

"It was all I could do," Mom went on, "to keep Jim from yelling out the window at them—and you know the way Jim sleeps."

Mrs. Flannigan smiled sympathetically. "Do I?" she said, "why one night I thought it was the fire whistle and here it was only your mister snoring—of course he works hard. Well, I'll have to get my beans on or Pat'll be home before dinner's ready and say I've been out gossipin' again."

"Yes," Mom answered, "I hear him sometimes—not that I'm listenin' to Mrs. Flannigan; but he does have a fine loud voice."

"Well, I've got to get my bean on—and then potatoes the Butcher is sellin' now are like bricks to cook."

Mom stood at the window and watched her go down the street toward her own house and then out straight across to Mrs. Farrell's.

World Still Combatting Malaria

Science Continues Its War Against This Ancient Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

FEW PERSONS are aware of the valuable service rendered the world by the health organization of the League of Nations. This institution is making a world-wide effort to combat disease. It publishes advice and instructions necessary for the control of disease.

An outstanding report of this health organization lies before me as I write. It describes recent advances made in the study of malaria.

No one can deny that at one time malaria was a menace to people all over the world. The disease has been known for many centuries. It was first described by Hippocrates, the father of medicine, in the fifth century B. C.

It was not until 1640 that any cure could be offered to sufferers from this disease. At that time it was discovered that when an extract made from the cinchona plant was given the victim of malaria great relief was obtained. More than two hundred years passed before it became known that the beneficial effect of the extract was due to the quinine found in the cinchona plant.

Later there followed a series of rapid and important discoveries concerning malaria fever. In 1850 a French army surgeon named Laveran discovered that malaria was caused by a parasite. He called it the "malaria plasmodium."

A few years later Sir Ronald Ross discovered that the disease could be transmitted by the bite of a certain variety of mosquito. The mosquito transmitted the disease only after biting a sufferer from malaria. The parasite developed in the mosquito and could be passed on to its next victim.

Control of the Disease

During the past three decades malaria fever has been controlled by the partial eradication of the mosquito, by the screening of homes in infected areas, and by proper hygienic measures and the isolation of malarial patients. It is true that the disease is not as common as in former years but malaria still continues to be a health problem which concerns the whole world.

Though quinine is extremely beneficial in malaria, medical science has not yet discovered a drug that will kill the parasite. When this is accomplished relapses of the fever will be prevented and the disease will be more completely controlled.

As I have implied, the spread of malaria is checked by destroying mosquitoes in all malarial infested sections of the world. Continued draining, oiling and sprinkling of mosquito-breeding places are essential. With support of the excellent work now conducted by such organizations as the League of Nations and our own health organizations, there will be complete eradication of this old and devastating disease of mankind.

Prize Doll to Paris

WORLAND, Wyo.—A Wyoming doll that won first prize during the recent American Legion convention in Chicago is to be exhibited in Paris with dolls from many countries. The doll, created by Ernest E. Coburn of Freeport, N. Y., represents Chief Washakie, famous leader of the Shoshoni Indians, who ceded valuable lands in Wyoming to the United States government.

"And then there was none," the world soon may be able to sing of the League of Nations if the latter's members keep dropping off one by one.

Only two months in which to do your 1932 Christmas shopping.

A new Marlene Dietrich, different than her millions of screen admirers have ever glimpsed in her previous pictures, will be seen in "The Song of Songs" her next Paramount picture, coming to the Cliftona Theatre on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

Mrs. Dietrich, who hitherto has appeared as a sophisticated, worldly woman, is revealed in her new production as an innocent young country girl of rare beauty, who goes to Berlin and, jilted by a handsome young sculptor, runs the gamut of tragic experience.

She marries a rich and elderly Baron whom she does not love, and, following their divorce, she becomes bitter and disillusioned, and a notorious woman in the gay, German city's night life.

"The Song of Songs" adapted from the literary classic of Hermann Sudermann, was directed by first Dietrich film which has not been directed by her discoverer, Josef von Sternberg.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Douglas, Acheson, and Sprague Dismal Over Gold-Buying Policy

WASHINGTON—Some of Roosevelt's Treasury advisers are not with him on his new policy of buying gold. . . . When he read Budget Director Lew Douglas and Under Secretary Dean Acheson an advance copy of the radio speech announcing the gold plan, their faces looked a mile long. . . . Professor O. M. W. Sprague remarked, "We are sailing uncharted seas."

The Nazi Government has sent a booklet to all diplomatic missions in Washington setting forth the peaceful aims of Adolf Hitler. . . . Gus Gennetrich, New York State cop, now personal bodyguard of the President, is putting on weight. Washington agrees with him. . . . Ferdie Pecora has one of his investigators ransacking State Department files for inside dope on Chase Bank loans to Cuba. . . . The State Department is giving every possible "co-operation" . . . Imagine this in the Hoover days, when Secretary Stimson refused to show Senator Johnson cables exchanged regarding Andy Mellon's Barco oil concession in Columbia.

Literary

The diaries and papers of "Tke" Hoover, recently deceased major domo of the White House, have been sold by his family to a nationally known weekly for a sum in excess of $25,000. . . . While alive, Hoover repeatedly refused lucrative offers for his memoirs. . . . The notes he left are voluminous, but unorganized. Many are undated. . . . Publication will begin as soon as they have been put in sequence and edited. . . . Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will soon begin a series of weekly syndicated newspaper articles. . . . Colonel Amos Woodcock, Federal Prohibition Director during the Hoover regime, has written a book on his experiences in this post. . . . One of the high lights of the volume is the story of the attempt by a group of New Jersey Republican leaders, headed by Senator "Ham" Kean, to force the dismissal of Commander John D. Pennington, arch-foe of the New Jersey rum ring. . . . For the first time since the legalization of 3.2 per cent beer, business shows a decline. . . . Sales for September were 10 percent below those of August. . . . However, this seasonal decline is appreciably less than that for the same period in 1918, the last year before prohibition.

Neglect

Dr. Hans Luther, jovial beer-drinker, sauerkraut connoisseur, and Ambassador of Germany, has been subjected to a persistent social neglect from many who once frequented the German Embassy. . . . Jewish millionaires— the Warburgs, Eugenes, other powerful financiers—have slipped out of the orbit of Luther's friends. . . . Professor Sprague is the only member of the Treasury Department staff besides Secretary Woodin who has a private elevator. They share the same one. . . . It is getting unpopular in official circles not to be pro-Soviet. . . . Billy Phillips, correct Under Secretary of State, is peeved because he was branded a Soviet hater. . . . White House geraniums remained in bloom this year until November first.

Justice Brandeis' seventy-seventh birthday, November 13, will see a new book about him published by the Princeton Press. . . . Ernest Meyer, first secretary of the German Embassy, wrote a book on Germany four years ago in which he prophesied Hitlerism. . . . Field workers of the Department of Agriculture report tremendous unpopularity of the NRA in the West and Middle West. . . . Some merchants have taken down the Blue Eagle because farmers refuse to buy from them. . . . Ex-Secretary Stimson dropped in to see Secretary H. H. H. the other day to explain what he knew of ex-President Machado's withdrawal of several million dollars from Cuban trust funds.

"Emperor Jones"

The success of Jesse Jones, R. F. C. Chairman, in pushing himself to the fore of Roosevelt's fiscal front has won for him a new name. . . . It is "Emperor Jones." . . . Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, 93-year-old ex-member of the Supreme Court, never goes out of his house any more. . . . Until recently, he walked the length of the block once on fair days with his old friend Justice Brandeis. . . . Now that Ambassador Luther does not go out so much socially, he is making a study of the American political customs. . . . He has been absorbed in the works of Lord Bryce and the Reards. . . . Orman W. Ewing, Democratic National Conventionman from Utah, so aroused the Democratic Committee in Utah that a resolution was passed forbidding all relations with him. . . . The trouble was with patronage. . . . Kenneth Hayes, publicity promoter for "Jeff" O'Connor, has had a tough time. . . . The sugary puffs about O'Connor which he poured out to the public, chiefly saw the waste-basket. . . . Publicity man for a Comptroller General was a novelty even under the New Deal.

student opinion

Do you think that admission prices for students for athletic contests at Circleville high school are too low?

Floyd Dunlap:

Yes and no. If athletics are not very sound financially, I think the students will try to help them within their means. But on the other hand if the admission price is beyond what they think they can pay they will stay away. I think a medium should be decided upon that is not too low for the athletic association and still not beyond the reach of the students.

Anne Thacher:

The price is just about right. One can see a show for the same amount, and an athletic contest is as good if not better than most shows. Prices should not be raised for a nickel or a dime's difference might keep away some people who are really interested and enjoy the game.

Harold Sharpe:

The price is all right the way it is. There are many people who might not come if the prices were higher. The attendance is not any too large now, and we want Circleville to have a good showing at the athletic contests. However, if there is a deficit in the treasury of the athletic association it would be justified in increasing the price of admission.

Dale Ankrom:

If the prices were any lower the upkeep of the team would be impossible. Most students that go to the athletic contests have a lot of school spirit, and would continue to attend if the prices were higher. The people who do not have school spirit would not go regardless of how low the admission fee might be.

Girl Reserves

The meeting of the Girl Reserves Thursday was in charge of the president, Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick.

The Circleville group of the Girl Reserves is planning a joint winter roast at the Riverside park on the Chillicothe pike with the Chillicothe group. It probably will be Monday, though no definite word has yet been received.

The club has been divided into two groups, the Athletic and Dramatic group. The former group under Miss Ryan has 27 members. They will hold their first meeting at the home of Charlotte Moore on Thursday, Nov. 9.

The Music and Dramatics group under Miss Tootle has 13 members. They will hold their meeting at Mary Curtin's on the same date.

Martha Mossbarger read a paper, "Preparation for Leisure," at Thursday's meeting.

Fading Fall

OUR bounteous Nature gives us Fall;

A gift supreme in beauty rare, Imbues us with the gypsy call To frisk in crisp November air.

But soon Fall's beauty will have died;

Old Autumn will have passed Old away, But in its wake will swiftly ride King Winter for his blustrous stay.

Is Hallowe'en Fun?

It seems that during the Hallowe'en season a boy will do many things he wouldn't do otherwise.

This sophomore boy was no exception. He was talking to this Junior girl at her doorstep on E. Union-st. Suddenly he began making artistic designs upon her windows.

(In soap.)

At this moment the grandpa appeared upon the scene. A matter of only moments later Louis was erasing his "artistry" via the water and cloth method.

LAST C.B.L. GAME TO BE PLAYED ON LOCAL GRIDIRON

Circleville High Plays Marysville Here Friday, November 10.

GAME STARTS AT 3:00

To Have No Place In Fight For Championship.

The story of the football season of the Central Buckeye league is pretty well told today with but one game in the entire league left to play, that between Circleville and Marysville here next Friday.

Yesterday C. H. S. met Westerville on the latter's gridiron, Bexley clashed with Delaware, while Marysville was busy at Grandview.

Yesterday's games had a definite bearing on the championship of the Central Buckeye league. Previous to that date Bexley and Westerville were in deadlock for league leadership.

Last year Bexley held high position of the league while Westerville was a comparatively weak team.

The only league game left will have no place in the fight for championship. In Marysville, C. H. S. clashes with a team which holds a place of isolation at the bottom of the league.

A summary of the league standing up until yesterday follows:

	W	T	L	P
Bexley	3	0	1	6
Westerville	3	0	1	6
Grandview	2	1	1	5
Delaware	2	0	2	4
Circleville	0	1	2	1
Marysville	0	0	3	0

The program committee for November is William Ashbrook, Tom Kirwin, and Robert May.
